

Here's what you need to know.

The Human Resource Management System (HRMS) replaces the state's 30-year-old system with a modern personnel and payroll computer system.

The new system will provide agencies with better data for planning and decision making.

You will receive a larger, expanded earnings statement that will give you, as an employee, a better snapshot of your own personnel and pay information.

Payroll system

How will it affect you?

What differences will I see?

The biggest change you will notice is a larger, expanded earnings statement, instead of the old “pay stub.”

Much like your bank statement, the new earnings statement will be printed on letter-sized paper and will contain more information.

If your pay is directly deposited, the earnings statement will include your deposit information.

Printed paychecks (warrants) will look the same but will no longer be attached to the earnings statement.

Will my pay change?

Your earnings (gross pay) will remain the same, but the amount of your check after deductions (net pay) will likely vary from paycheck to paycheck because deduction amounts will vary from pay period to pay period.

Why will deductions vary?

FEDERAL TAXES

The new system uses a different method to calculate taxes. As a result, deduction amounts may be pennies different when comparing one pay period to another. Both methods are appropriate, they are just different.

WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Your workers' compensation (medical aid) deduction* will now be based on the actual number of hours worked, rather than a flat 80 hours per pay period. That means your deduction will decrease if you take leave or work fewer hours in a pay period. It will increase if you work more hours in a pay period (including overtime).

The Department of Transportation and the Department of Printing already calculate medical aid deductions using this method.

* This is the employees' share of their workers' compensation insurance premium.

When will this happen?

Most employees will receive their first paychecks processed by the new system on July 10, 2006.
